PIONEER WASHER.

JAMES BRUSIE,

AGENT FOR OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

THIS CELEBRATED WASHING MACHINE IS now for the first time introduced to the Oregon public. It is unrivalled for its simplicity, durability and the rapidity and ease of its action. Washing the dirtiest linen perfectly clean in from five to ten minutes, with but slight labor, and lasting, with proper care, for ten years. The wear and tear of clothing in washing by this machine is vastly less than by any other known process of washing. It is easily worked by one person.

This Machine captured the Special Premium at the Siskiyou State Fair, and all that have used it pronounce it an invaluable adjunct to all housekeepers and families and washing men and washing women.

It has been extensively introduced throughout the State of California, and receives the universal commendation of all who have used it.

The undersigned is now in the city of Portland, where he can be seen at Mr. O. Kilbourn's Store, corner of Front and Yamhill Sts., East side, Portland, and is prepared to furnish the Machine to purchasers and also to sell and dispose of County Rights for the sale of the same.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The Senate after an executive session took up the House bill appropriating one million six hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars to carry out the reconstruction act. The amount was reduced to a million and then passed.

The House bill for the relief of soldiers who left their regiments after the surrender of Lee, was referred to the military committee.

The chairman presented a communication transmitting the orders, instructions, opinions, etc., issued to commanders of military districts relative to the reconstruction act. The President states that it is exceedingly difficult to estimate the expense for carrying into full effect the second reconstruction acts. If the State governments are to be deposed and entire machinery placed under exclusive control of military commanders, it will probably require fourteen millions. The President raised the question whether the United States, by abolishing the State Governments, does not become responsible for State debts not incurred in consequence of the rebellion, which approximate to a hundred millions, and recommends the question to the consideration of Congress. His message is somewhat elaborate on this point.

Mr. Howard, referring to this position of the President's communication, said that it was all moonshine.

Mr. Hendricks said that the same doctrine was laid down by Governor Morton, of Indiana, two years ago as is now held by President Johnson. He thought it not advisable for the President to express a hypocritical opinion on questions of finance, especially at the present time when the people are so sensitive on the subject of the increase of the public debt, and he did not believe the President's assumption correct. The Southern States are not considered provinces, but States. Mr. Hendricks thought in the event of entire abrogation of Southern States by the Federal Government, it would be a question of great doubt whether the State obligations would rest on the General Government.

Mr. Fessenden said he was glad the message met with no response or abandonment. He regretted that the President had sent such a document to the Senate. Such a document might have a bad effect if the people were not so intelligent as to perceive its fallacy. Other Senators discussed the message, which was finally ordered printed, and the Senate adjourned.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—In the House, Kelly introduced a bill declaring valid decision of military courts in regard to commissions made in civil cases in the rebel States, where no civil courts were in operation. Referred.

Williams offered an amendment to the Constitution authorizing the President to remove Judges of the Supreme and other Federal courts, on the recommendation of two-thirds of each house of Congress.

Noell introduced a bill to make legal tenders receivable for duties.

Several resolutions were introduced in favor of taxing Government bonds.

Robinson offered a resolution for the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the working of the Internal Revenue detective system and seizures made by unauthorized persons.

Schenck introduced a resolution in regard to the appointment of metropolitan board of revenue in New York, who shall annually fix and what object. A debate arose and the resolution went over.

A resolution was adopted instructing the Judiciary Committee to inquire whether the States of Kentucky, Maryland and Delaware have a Republican form of government.

Senate amendment with an appropriation to carry out the Reconstruction Bill, amounting to one million dollars, was concurred in. A number of bills and resolutions were offered.

A bill was introduced to repeal the bill of last session, providing for making treaties with Indians. It was passed. Adjourned.

Mystification Impossible

In the National Constitution there is a clause which runs in this wise Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies giving them aid and comfort

For the past two years there has been a persistent systematic effort among a large class of people to destroy the meaning and force of this constitutional provision And the effort still goes on It is argued that the late rebels cannot be tried and punished as traitors because they were recognized as belligerents and the insurrection became a war When the conflict assumed the proportions of a war and began to be conducted on principles of recognized warfare from that moment it was no longer treason What says the Constitution? Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies" A moment s consideration of this definition shows the futility of the plea so often set up that because the rebellion became a war its authors ceased to be traitors They became guilty of treason from the very fact that they levied war against the United States

This declaration of the Constitution is too explicit to admit of any other construction or interpretation Of course the citizens of a foreign country which has levied war against the United States cannot be guilty of treason against them, for they owe no allegiance to the United States The definition can therefore only apply to citizens of the United States who dispute the authority of the Government by force, or in a word, who levy war against it The idea that those who were lately engaged in armed resistance against the authority of the United States are not traitors because the conflict became a war, will not therefore in any view, bear a moment's examination The definition of treason given by the Constitution has exact application to their case The plea that the insurrection passed into a war does not excuse its authors It merely brings their act more specifically within the definition of treason

The extent of the war can make no difference whatever in the application of the definition The Constitution does not discriminate between great and small wars It sees no difference whether the authority of the United States is set at defiance by a few thousand men, as in the Whisky Rebellion, or by eight millions, as in the late attempt to divide the Union The clause in the Constitution embraces every case Whoever, owing allegiance to the United States, levies war against them or adheres to their enemies, is guilty of treason No sophistry can argue it away.

The sympathy of a large class of people for the late rebels has led to this persistent effort to clear them of treason and to debauch the public mind by such inculcating the idea that their act was not a crime We commend to certain Democratic editors among us who are so fond of arguing that the Southern uprising was not treason because it was war, a line of argument beginning with that provision of our fundamental law which declares that "levying war" is treason

Advice Gratis

The Jacksonville Sentinel volunteers a word of advice to those who contemplate leaving Oregon for California We copy it, though well aware that advice on such a subject will have little weight with restless people who are continually moving about without knowing the cause of their discontent. There are migratory classes of people as well as of birds and other animals, and each will equally obey the instincts of their nature. As a general thing advice will have about as much effect with one of these classes as another But as it is an article that comes so very cheap, we copy and endorse what the Sentinel has written

We learn that a large number of people are leaving the Willamette for the Humboldt Bay country, via Waldo and Crescent City, and we wish to respectfully offer them a little wholesome advice In the first place we advise people in search of homes not to go to that section of California, for the reason that every acre of Government land that is worth locating for agricultural purposes, has already been taken up, and can only be acquired by paying a heavy price for it In the next place, people are very foolish to risk their lives in raising cattle for the benefit of the thieving Diggers that infest that section, and even if they are successful in that business, they are no nearer a market than in Oregon, where there is perfect safety Next, the stock ranges of Humboldt county are not only very limited, but badly eaten out, and offer no inducements to stock raisers Lastly, if people are determined to go to a section of country that they will soon be glad to leave, we would inform them that from Crescent City to Humboldt is about ninety miles, over the worst mule trail ever traveled, and to reach there with their wagons, over this route, except by shipping them on a steamer at Crescent City, is an impossibility. If any deluded people leave for that country, after reading this advice, we venture to say that they will regret not having heeded it, and find that, far from exaggerating the difficulties to be overcome, we have scarcely told the whole truth

Some weeks ago a little paper published at Salem gave a long imaginary account of the death of Secretary Browning We noticed the announcement, and expressed an opinion that it was "certainly a mistake" Whereupon the little paper aforesaid (which we are sorry to say, out of regard for its proprietor, is commonly reported to be edited by a fellow whose veracity is least respected where he is most known) retorted in a manner as offensive as possible, accusing this paper of "metropolitan swaggot" in presuming to doubt its pretended bit of news, and making merry over our supposed ignorance of important passing events "Now Browning"—we quote that enterprising journal—"happens to be dead, and the Oregonian happens to be behindhand as to the fact" A long imaginary account of his death was then copied for the "benefit" of this paper Now as the telegraph announces that Secretary Browning has recovered and gone to his department to work as usual, it will probably be possible for the Salem paper to understand that we were neither "behindhand" in giving a piece of news, nor beforehand in chronicling the Secretary's death

It will be remembered that one Miles of Lewis county, Washington Territory, undertook to play a sharp game at the late election, in order to defeat his opponent for the Legislature, and succeeded in defeating himself Never was any awkward wight more fairly caught in a snare he had laid for another But the result of Hon Miles stratagem is not merely his own defeat It insures a Republican majority in both branches of the Legislature Otherwise the Democrats would have had a majority of one in the Council, while in the House there would have been a tie The Republicans feel very grateful to Mr Miles for his sacrificing efforts in their behalf, and many of them are said to have expressed a willingness to make provision for his support along with Frank Clark in the "Orphan" Asylum at Steilacoom

In his great speech on Russian America, now Walrussia, Senator Sumner shows the necessity of "reconstructing" the days of the week in that country As the settlements there "came Eastward from Russia bringing with the Russian flag Western time, the day is earlier by twenty four hours with them than with us, so that their Sunday is our Saturday. This must be rectified according to the national meridian so that there shall be the same Sunday for all, and the other days of the week shall be in corresponding harmony" Here is a chance for a high dispute about a Sunday law Suppose there are people of orthodox views in Walrussia who refuse on their consciences to recognize Monday as Sunday and to make the Sunday they have always observed a Saturday? And suppose again that this dispute engenders a rebellion

STATE ITEMS

The Statesman reports that the Willamina Academy has been marked by an exemplarity during the past year

A letter from Roseburg states that the South was a quiet lay as compared with the excitement broken out by an ex-Confederate Colonel

On Monday the 22d inst., the public examination of the classes in Willamette University will begin and continue three days There commencement exercises will follow on Thursday the 25th There will be graduating ceremonies also in the medical department

We have before us a copy of the minutes of the seventeenth annual session of the Baptist Association of Western Oregon, held at Forest Grove on the statistical tables we gather the following Number of churches 21 Number of ministers 16 Whole number of members 881 Received during the past year 81 Dismissed and by death 11

FROM WALLA WALLA

The following items appeared in the Statesman of the 12th

HARVEST

The farmers in this valley are busily engaged in harvesting their crop We learn that harvest hands are very scarce, and that as a consequence high wages are offered Good hands command from $2 50 to $3 00 per diem

FAST TIME

Our genial friend John Creighton, who is a whole team in himself left Portland on Friday morning at 5 o clock, and arrived at Walla Walla on Saturday afternoon at half past 1 o'clock, having made the entire distance in 32½ hours This is what may be called fast time

NEW DISCOVERY

We hear that paying mines have been discovered on the Columbia river near White Bluffs. They prospect all the way from three to eight cents to the pan, but are so situated that it is difficult to get water on the claims Parties are now on the ground and are sanguine that if they can get water they have a good thing

CONTESTED ELECTION

The case of H M Hodgin vs A Scitel involving the title to the office of Sheriff of Walla Walla county, was up before Judge Chase, on Tuesday and Wednesday last On Wednesday, owing to the illness of the Judge, the hearing of the case was continued

Thomas Francis Meagher

The Sacramento Bee publishes the following account of this remarkable man

General Thomas F Meagher was drowned at Fort Benton on the Missouri river on the 1st inst by falling from the deck of a steamboat into the river Meagher was an Irishman by birth, and at the time of his death about 45 years of age He was first brought into public notice by his association with John Mitchel, Smith O'Brien, Terrence Belew McManus, John Martin and others of the Young Ireland party, through the publication in Dublin of the "United Irishman" in 1847 8, and more especially by his "apostrophe to the sword," delivered in the latter year before an immense meeting in Conciliation Hall, Dublin the Lord Mayor being in the chair For that wild trenk at Slievenamon, when a few undrilled, unarmed and unofficered peasants attempted to revolutionize Ireland by the sword and drive the British power beyond its borders, he with others was arrested tried for treason and sentenced to perpetual banishment in the penal colony of Van Diemen's Land or Tasmania. He remained there as a prisoner and convict from 1848 until 1857, when he escaped in a vessel and landed at San Francisco He delivered a series of lectures in that city and at Sacramento, and soon after sailed for New York There he lectured also—lived in grand style—married a daughter of Dr Jacob Townsend, the sarsaparilla man, and fell into an abundance of this world's stores The Government sent him for awhile on a mission to Nicaragua or some other of the Central American powers, and when the war broke out he buckled on his sword and took service in the Irish battalion, with the rank, we believe, of Captain. If memory serves us right, he was at the first battle of Bull Run, and with his men did excellent execution, in the hope of turning the fate of that terrible day, but the demoralization of the raw troops was too extensive to be checked, and the whole army had to run He remained in the service, and by the eloquence of his tongue and the power of his pen—for he both lectured and wrote on the war—helped materially to keep the ranks full, and even to add to their numbers. He rose to the rank of Brigadier General in the army of the Potomac, and the last heard of his war-life was in the great seven days' battle and retreat from Richmond, or the Seven Pines, where both he and his command were given much credit in the reports of the day for driving back time and again, the flushed and hopeful rebels who fought like demons, regarding not death, in the expectation of annihilating the Federal army Upon the organization of the Territory of Montana, Meagher was appointed by President Johnson Secretary of the Territory, and afterwards became its acting Governor, which he was at the time of his death In politics he sided with Johnson against Congress, and was looked upon by the Democracy of that Territory as one of them He was among the most eloquent of the living orators ranking with Kossuth, Baker, and their compeers —was noble hearted and generous, but had that social feeling which attaches to but too many of his countrymen, and which, we fear, was the immediate cause of his death—a yearning for intoxicating drinks He is now no more A brave man has fallen—one who has done his adopted country some service in her hour of greatest need Peace to his remains

Lesson of the Washington Election

The editor of the Eugene Journal who is still in Washington writes to his paper a long letter concerning the late election resulting in a Republican victory in that city He says that the Democrats are very greatly disappointed at their failure to control the negro vote and quotes a remark he heard from one of them that it "was no use for a Democrat to go to the polls again in any part of the country south of Baltimore" We quote an entire paragraph from the letter:

The difficulties which the Copperheads encountered here will meet them in every State, and will bring upon them certain defeat On the question of suffrage, like every question which arose during the war, the Copperheads chose the losing card They dare not oppose negro suffrage in the South now, without putting themselves into a perpetual minority for the negroes and radical whites can carry every State against them And by coming out for negro suffrage after it has been secured by the Radicals, they have less than an even chance with their rivals for the colored vote of the South, while it weakens and disorganizes them in the North The head of Democracy in the South calls on the negro to come and help it and the tail of the party in the North looks on with wonder, and, like the boy don't know exactly what to say The head of the party in the South cannot afford to fight the negro any longer and the tail of the organization in the North dare not set up against their "Southern brethren" and as their chief stock in trade and the only issue on which they had any hope of cheating the Radicals, was opposition to negro suffrage what will they do? The passage of the reconstruction act shivered the timbers" of the already sinking old hulk of Democracy It is a relic of the past and does not represent the enlightened sentiment of the age It has had its day and must soon go down and the places which know it once will "know it no more forever The United Republican party is in harmony with the enlightened humane and advancing sentiments of the nation and the age It will carry the North with increased majorities and will soon control the South and impartial suffrage will prevail in every State That is the inevitable tendency of things Those who oppose it fight against fate and the civilization of the age in which we live Even in aristocratic England the advocates of restricted class suffrage are defeated and go no down before the march of events It is so in Prussia and the countries of Europe The aristocrats of those old kingdoms cannot resist the republican tendency of the age and those who would attempt it in Republican America must be as mad as a March hare

The Republican party is steadily growing in Kentucky In 1860 Lincoln received only 1,364 votes in the State In the late election the Republican vote was 31,371 The "Third Party" which came into the field with such flourish of trumpets threw only 1 089 votes in the entire State

WOOL AT THE EAST.—Mr S. G Reed has kindly placed in our possession a letter from Messrs Fenno & Childs, Wool Commission Merchants, Boston, in which the writers make flattering mention of Oregon wool They say: "At the suggestion of our mutual friend, Emery Burchard, Esq, we beg leave to enclose our annual circular and to say that we are dealing largely in domestic wools, and you will find Boston altogether the best market for every description. Oregon wools are much sought for and bring here for their working qualities and general condition. Oregon combing wools are much sought for and bring from 60 cts for ordinary unwashed, to 60 or 65 cts for bright clean wools of the longest staple We make reasonable advances on consignments and have every facility for making sales and returns promptly, etc" From the Circular alluded to in the above extract, dated May 1st, we gather the following items which may be of value or interest to growers and dealers here—

"Manufacturers scrutinize the condition of wool much more closely than they did during the war, and it is difficult to sell heavy ill-conditioned wool at its relative value"

"As Delaine and Combing Wool is getting to be of great importance in this country, we advise farmers to pay more attention to the Cotswold and Leicester breeds of sheep, which they will find more profitable than the heavy gummy Merino."

"We are obliged to throw all heavy buck fleeces with unwashed wool, and, in buying, a discount of one-third should always be made, and one-half on all unwashed bucks."

"It is generally better for farmers to sell their wool early, and we have noticed that Wool marketed in July and August has averaged them a better price than any other month."

"The average price of fleece washed wool in the United States, from 1827 to 1861, was, fine, 50 1-10c; fine medium, 42 2-10c; coarse, 35½c. In January, 1862, price ranged from 48@55c; 1863, 58@72; 1864, 73@86c; 1865, 86@91 67; 1866, 58@80c; 1867, 43@70."

"The production of wool in the United States last year, including Texas, California and Oregon, was about 140,000,000lbs., being something below our estimate Although in some sections the sheep have not wintered well, and many of them have died, we think the next clip will amount to at least 150,000,000 lbs."

"The importations of Foreign Wool for 1866 was about 56,000,000 lbs. against 45,665,969 lbs. in 1865, and 75,000,000 lbs in 1864."

"Manufacturers must have a certain amount of wool to keep their machinery in operation, but they will buy as little as possible, expecting to see a lower range of prices when the new clip comes to market. They cannot afford to pay present prices for wool, unless their goods can be disposed of to better advantage There have been several heavy failures among them in the State of New York during the past year, and the great majority have lost money."

RECORDER'S COURT.—In this court, yesterday morning, Chas. McKeen, F. Delschneider, and I. Smith were arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct—breaking in the door of the Star saloon—but not being ready for trial, the cases was continued till this morning.

Fred. Delschneider, charged with firing a pistol within the city limits; and for disorderly conduct otherwise, was fined $5 and costs in each case.

Wm. Sweeney, assault and battery; case continued till this morning

Wm. B. Smith was charged with selling liquor to Indians. An Indian who talks English very well, testified that Smith on Friday night last, went to an Indian ranch in below the city, where an Indian frail was going and sold bottles of whisky which he brought with him. The keeper of the Star of the Union saloon, where Smith is employed as bar keeper, testified that Smith was all the time at the saloon from half past seven o'clock P. M. of Friday till 3 o'clock, on the morning of Saturday. Another witness testified that he was at the Star saloon from 9 till 12 on the night in question and that Smith was there all the time during those hours. On this testimony the defendant was discharged.

RIO CALIFORNIA—LITTLE OREGON.—Every little while we see something in the Eastern papers to remind us what a "Big Sis" California is, and what a "wee thing" is the rest of this coast. It is true we have won a state as California in the Far Western grass lands as in the Golden State of California. For instance, the American Journal of Mining, of June 1st, comes to us with an article from the S. F. Mercantile Gazette, on the coal mines of California, in which the mines at Bellingham Bay, the Gowlitz, and the banks of the Columbia, cut the principal figure. The Gazette borrowed thunder from Oregon and, Washington, for California, knowing it to be a mean, despicable appropriation of other people's property; the Journal of Mining copied, perhaps innocently enough but certainly very ignorantly. Most of the readers of the latter, no doubt, read the article without questioning the location of Bellingham Bay and the "banks of the Columbia" to California. Now, really, we would like to know why a paper, like the Mercantile Gazette cannot get above the petty dishonesty of claiming and appropriating everything creditable, belonging to California's neighbors.

LONE FIR CEMETERY.—Mr. Daly informs us that the work of improving the Lone Fir Cemetery, east side of the river, is progressing with satisfactory rapidity. Men have been at work for about two weeks, clearing out underbrush, laying out and making walks and putting the place in general good repair. The person superintending the work has engaged to keep the cemetery in good order for five years, receiving therefor such contributions as may be obtained. There are now subscribed about two hundred dollars, and Mr. Daly thinks one hundred and fifty more may be got which will be sufficient to pay for the work in contemplation for this season. If there are any who desire to contribute toward this object, they will find the papers at Daly and Steven's office, Morrison street. Persons who have already subscribed are requested to make prompt payments.

DEATH OF RT. REV. BISHOP SCOTT.—A private dispatch was received by Capt. Flanders, in this city, yesterday afternoon announcing the death of Rt. Rev. Bishop Scott, at New York. In our regular news dispatch from San Francisco, it stated that a dispatch was received in San Francisco, by W. G. Badger, announcing that Bishop Scott, of Oregon, died at the Brevoort House, New York, on the 14th inst., after a brief illness. This news soon became generally known throughout the city and threw a gloom over all who had known the deceased while here. It is scarcely six weeks since he left us, in vigorous health, to seek a milder climate for the benefit of his wife's health which had become seriously impaired. The news that he has gone from us forever will strike heavily upon the hearts of those to whom his associations as a minister, neighbor and friend, had made him best known.

ACCIDENT TO THE FANNIE TROUP.—On her return trip to Vancouver, yesterday afternoon, the Fannie Troup struck her shaft nearly off, when near the head of Swan Island, and, of course, was unable to either proceed or return. The Cascade coming along, towed her back to this city, and brought up the most of her passengers Mr. Troup, the engineer of the Fannie discovered the condition of the shaft in time to prevent the disaster which must have followed a moment later, when the shaft would have broken off entirely. When we saw Capt. Turnbull, last evening, he was endeavoring to negotiate for another steamer to take the place of the Fannie Troup for a few days, till the shaft can be repaired. The Williamette Iron Works will do the job.

PASSENGERS FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—The steamship Orizaba sailed from this port at 7:30 P. M., yesterday, for San Francisco, with the following list of passengers. Hon. A. Flanders, H. S. Benson and wife, J. S. Knight, Mrs L Leon, J H Gray, Miss Maggie Curley, Mrs Benson and 3 daughters, M F Colt, J Drollin, F B Mixon and wife, Thos Olcott, G B Graves and daughter, J R Yoe, Wm. Burnett, S Shoemwasser, wife and 3 children Mrs H Wilkins, Chas Taylor, Jacob Mayer, Rev Thos Fraser, Jas Cash, Miss Riddle and sister, J A Comerford, A H Wentzel, John McWilliams and 5 children, Mrs Carter and daughter, Col. West (W F & Co's Messenger) and 20 in the steerage.

MONEY LAYING AROUND LOOSE.—Every day, almost, for some months, we have heard people complaining about the scarcity of money, and we had naturally come to the conclusion that there was really not money enough in the country to answer the ordinary purposes of commerce. This, however, is clearly a mistake as we have late reason to believe. We are informed on very good authority, that there are several sums of money lying idle in Portland safes, awaiting investment on loans at a reasonable rate of interest. It would, perhaps, be a mistake, however, to take this as an evidence of business prosperity, for it may result more from the withdrawal of funds from active employment than from any other cause.

STEAM COFFEE AND SPICE MILLS.—Mr. J. F. Jones has recently removed his establishment to a larger and better building on the corner of Second and Main streets, where he is now almost fitted up and ready to go ahead again. His conveniences are much greater than in his late location, and as soon as a little fitting of machinery can be completed, he will be ready to furnish, at wholesale or retail, a very superior quality of prepared coffees, spices, etc. He puts up nothing of this sort except such as he prepares himself, and can, therefore, warrant everything to be pure and exactly what he represents it. His stock, machinery, fixtures, and appliances in general, are now only second to one or two on the Pacific coast. This being the case, he can, and he says he will, deal more liberally than ever before. Give him a call

U. S. DISTRICT COURT—DEADY, JUSTICE.—Tuesday, July 16th: In the matter of F. Sargent, a defaulting witness, default having been heretofore entered, judgment of forfeiture of bail was rendered in favor of the United States; the amount of bail was deposited by the bondsman, with the court

United States vs. H. Robinson, held by the Commissioner to answer in the court, to the charge of smuggling, default of appearance having been heretofore entered, judgment of forfeiture of recognizance—$200—was rendered in favor of the United States

The court adjourned until Monday, July 22d

FREIGHT FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—The Oriflamme, which sailed last evening for San Francisco, took the following freights: 708 qr sks flour, 538 hides, 665 bales wool, 195 bbls salmon, 15 hf bbls salmon, 100 hf bbls dried apples, 174 gunnies bacon, 30 cases bacon, 26 boxes eggs, 25 kegs scale shoes, 16 bbls hoarding, 68½ kgs butter, 12 cases of serpentine, 11 pkgs bottles, 4 bbls ridge, 3 coils rope, 24 pkgs hubs, 2 cases spokes, 35 cases nuts, 7 bbls currants, 14 pkgs leather.

STREET GRADING.—The contract of Simmons & Son to grade North Front street, between C and E streets, was completed on Monday They have done, apparently, a good job, and the section of street certainly wears a better appearance than of old The grade is now continuous from the end of the Nicolson to the other side of the gas works.

TEXATURE.—By the Cascade, Wells, Fargo & Co. received yesterday, from Lewiston and points below, $30,000 in treasure. There was no connection of the expresses beyond Lewiston, either to Boise or elsewhere. Considering this, the receipt was a large one and shows that money is getting easier along the banks of the Columbia

THE FISHERIES.—The steamer Fidelster is advertised to sail for Victoria at 7 o'clock P M., on Thursday, the 18th

GOOD TEMPLARS.—Grand Lecturer, E G Adams, on Thursday, July 11th, organized a Lodge of Good Templars, of seventeen charter members, at Cloquato, the county seat of Lewis county, W. T It takes the name of the "Anchor of Hope" Lodge The following is the list of officers: John B Nash, W C T; Miss Carrie E. Davis, W. R. H. S.; Miss Debbie W Hedgdon, W V T; Lute J. Davis, W. Sec'y; Wm F Mills, W F S; Austin L Davis, W F S.; Mrs. Mary W. Stearns, W. T.; Thos M Pearson, W. M.; Thos A Lemmon, W. D.; Millard F. Lemmon, W Q C; Henry N Stearns, W. C.; James N. Bowlin, P. W C T; Wm. Lemmon, Lodge Deputy.

CIRCUIT COURT—SHATTUCK, JUDGE.—Tuesday, July 16th: A. C. Gibbs et al. vs John W Kern; referred to W. S. Caldwell to hear evidence and report upon all the issues.

Lewis Hadlich vs Fullmore & Ham, continued until next term of the Court.

State of Oregon vs Dorville Brown, most of the day occupied in hearing testimony of witnesses and argument of counsel submitted to jury at half past five o'clock P M; verdict of jury, "guilty as charged in the indictment"

THE RAINS AND THE CROPS.—We have lately met several farmers from the interior counties of the Willamette, from whom we learn that the recent rains have done much good to all late sown grain crops The more advanced crops of course, were too nearly ripe to be benefited. The showers of the last two or three days, however, have done some damage to grass, mown an lying in swath. The loss of hay will be small, perhaps, compared with the greater good done to grain crops

CITY LICENSES.—Several complaints were entered before the Recorder yesterday, against parties for carrying on avocations without licenses. Many of the parties charged may have overlooked the necessity of providing themselves with licences, without any intention of evading the law, but through negligence. Prompt attention to the requirements of the license ordinances, will, of course, save both trouble and costs.

SHOALWATER BAY OYSTERS.—A gentleman just up from Shoalwater Bay, informs us that the shipments of oysters from the beds of that bay in 1866, amounted to 20,000 baskets, to San Francisco alone This year, not less than 30,000 baskets will be sent to that market, of which one firm—Crellin & Co.—will send 20,000.

ATTENTION.—The Athletic Base Ball Club will meet on their grounds, west of the Oregon Iron Works, for practice this, Wednesday, afternoon, at five o'clock, promptly.

WILLAMETTE FERRIGHTS.—The steamer Senator, yesterday, brought down 4 bales paper, 93 bales wool, 40 quarter sacks flour and 201 bags of wheat

CONVENTION OF MILLOWNERS.—The principals of the House of Rothschilds have had a convention at Paris. Barmon Bros have had no convention, but still continue to undersell any house in Oregon, on corner Front and Morrison streets, Portland. Paper collars 25 cts, white shirts, $1 50 to $2 25; cassimere pants, $4 to $6 50; velvet vests, $4 to $6

HELMBOLD'S CONCENTRATED EXTRACT BUCHU
Is the Great Diuretic.
HELMBOLD'S CONCENTRATED EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA
Is the Great Blood Purifier.

Both are prepared according to rules of Pharmacy and Chemistry, and are the most active that can be made

THE PEOPLE have been so much imposed upon by several worthless Sarsaparillas, that we are glad to be able to recommend a preparation which can be depended on as containing the virtues of that invaluable medicine, and is worthy of the public confidence. Dr. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures when anything can cure the diseases that require an alterative medicine.

TAKE NO MORE UNPLEASANT AND UNSAFE REMEDIES for unpleasant and dangerous diseases. Use HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU AND IMPROVED ROSE WASH.

Napoleon's Three Warning s

The celebrated French Duke of Otranto, was retained for a time, it is well known, in the service of the Bourbons, after their restoration to the throne of France He retired to the town of Aix, in Provence, and there lived in affluent ease upon the gains of his long busy career Curiosity attracted many visitors around this remarkable man and he was habitually free in communicating his reminiscences of the great events which it had been his lot to witness On one occasion the company assembled in his saloon heard from his lips the following story,

'By degrees as Napoleon assumed the power and authority of a king, everything about him, even in the days of the consulate began to wear a court like appearance. All the old monarchical habitudes were revived, one by one Among the revivals of this kind, the custom of attending mass previous to the hour of audience was restored and Bonaparte himself was punctual in his appearance at the Chapel of St Cloud on such occasions Nothing could be more mundane than the mode of performing these religious services The actresses of the opera were the chorists, and great crowds of busy, talkative people were in the habit of frequenting the gallery of the chapel, from the windows of which the First Consul and Josephine could be seen with their suites and friends The whole formed merely a daily exhibition of the consular court to the people.

At one particular time the punctuality of Bonaparte in his attendance at mass was rather distressing to his wife. The quick and jealous Josephine had discovered that the eyes of her husband were directed to a gallery, where there regularly appeared the face of a young girl of un common beauty. The chestnut tresses, the brilliant eyes, and graceful figure of this personage, caused more uneasiness to the Consul's wife, as the stranger's eyes were bent no less often upon Bonaparte than his were upon her.

"Who is that young girl?" said Josephine one day at the close of the service, "what can she seek from the First Consul? I observed her drop a billet just down at his feet. He picked it up I saw him"

No one could tell Josephine who the object of her notice precisely was, there were some who declared her to be an emigrant lately returned, and one who was probably desirous of the intervention of the First Consul in favor of her family.

With such guesses as this the Consul's wife was obliged to rest satisfied for a time

After the audience of that same day had passed, Bonaparte expressed a wish for a drive in the park, and accordingly went out accompanied by his wife, his brother Joseph, Generals Duroc and Canbacores, and Hortense Beauharnais, wife of Louis Bonaparte.

The King of Prussia had just presented Napoleon with a superb set of horses, four in number, and these were harnessed to an open chariot for the party. The Consul took it into his head to drive in person, and mounted into the coachman's place. The chariot set off, but just as it was turning into the park, it went crash against a stone at the gate, and the First Consul was thrown to the ground. He attempted to rise, but again fell prostrate in a stunned or insensible condition. Meanwhile the horses sprang forward with the chariot, and were only stopped when Duroc, at the risk of his life, threw himself out and seized the reins. Josephine was taken out in a swooning state. The rest of the party quickly returned to the First Consul and carried him back to his apartments. On recovering his senses fully, the first thing which he did was to put his hand into his pocket and pull out the slip of paper dropped at his feet in the chapel Leaning over his shoulder Josephine read these words "Do not drive out in your carriage to day."

"This can have no allusion to our late accident," said Bonaparte. "No one could foresee that I was to play the part of a coachman to day, or that I should be awkward enough to drive against a stone. Go, Duroc, and examine the chariot."

Duroc obeyed. Soon after he returned, very pale, and took the First Consul aside.

"Citizen Consul," said he, "had you not struck a stone, and stopped our drive, we had all been lost!"

"How?" was the reply.

"There was in the carriage, concealed behind the back seat, a bomb, a massive bomb, and with a slow match attached to it—kindled! Things had been so arranged, that in a quarter of an hour we should have been scattered among the trees in the park of St. Cloud. There must be some treachery close at hand.. Fouche must be told of this—Dubois must be warned."

"Not a word, then," replied Bonaparte. "The knowledge of one plot but engenders a second. Let Josephine remain ignorant of the danger she has escaped. Hortense, Joseph, Cambaceres, tell none of them; and let the Government journals say not a word about my fall."

The First Consul was then silent for some time. At length he said: "Duroc, you come to-morrow to mass in the chapel, and examine attention ... ng girl who I shall point out to you. She ... aby the fourth window in the gallery, on ... Follow her home or cause her to be ... and bring me intelligence of her name, ... and her circumstances. It will be uct... ... I would not have the po... ... terfere Have you the ... care of the bomb ... Citizen Consul, ... ben, let us return drive in the park," said Bonaparte.

The drive was resumed, but on this occasion the coachman was allowed to fulfil his own duties

On the morrow the eyes of more than one person was turned to the window in the gallery. But the jealous Josephine sought in vain for the elegant figure of the girl. She was not there. The impatient First Consul, with his confidant, Duroc, were greatly annoyed by her non-appearance, and small was the attention paid by them to the services that day. Their anxiety was fruitless. She was seen at mass no more.

The summers of Napoleon were chiefly spent at Malmaison; the winters at St. Cloud and the Tuileries. Winter had come on, and the First Consul had been holding court in the great apartment of the last of these palaces. It was the 3d of the month, which the Republicans well call nivose, and in the evening Bonaparte entered his carriage to go the opera, accompanied by his aide-de-camp, Lauriston, and Generals Lannes and Berthier. The vehicle was about to start, when a female, wrapped in a black mantle, rushed out upon the Place Carousel, made her way into the middle of the guards about to accompany Napoleon, and held forth a paper, crying:

"Citizen Consul! read, read!"

Bonaparte, with that smile which Horizons describes as so very irresistible, saluted the petitioner, and then stretched out his hand for the missive

"A petition, madame!" said he, inquiringly; and then continued, "fear nothing; I shall peruse it and see justice done!"

"Citizen Consul!" cried the woman, imploringly, joining her hands

What she would have further said was lost The coachman, who, it was afterwards said, was intoxicated, gave the lash to his horses, and off they sprung with the speed of lightning. Napoleon, throwing into his hat the paper he had received, remarked to his companions:

"I could not well see her figure, but I think the poor woman is young"

The carriage dashed rapidly along, it was just issuing from the streets of St. Nicholas, when a frightful detonation was heard, mingled with and followed by the crash of broken windows. The infernal machine had exploded!"

Uninjured, the carriage of the Consul and its inmates were whirled with undiminished rapidity to the opera. Bonaparte entered his box with serene and unruffled deportment. He saluted, as usual, the assembled spectators, to whom the news of the explosion came with all the speed which rumor exercises on such occasions.

All were stunned and stupified. Bonaparte alone was perfectly calm. He stood with crossed arms, listening to the oratorio of Haydn, which was execution on that evening.

Suddenly he remembered the paper put in his hands. He took it out and read these lines

"In the name of Heaven, Citizen Consul, do not go to the opera to-night, if you do go, pass not through the street of St Nicholas"

The warning came, in some respects, too late

On reading these words, the First Consul calmed to raise his eyes Exactly opposite to him, in a box in the third tier, sat the young girl of the chapel of St Cloud, and with joined hands seemed to utter prayers of gratitude for the escape that had taken place Her head had no covering but her flowing and beautiful hair, and her person was wrapped in a dark mantle, which the Consul recognized as identical with that worn by the woman who had delivered the paper to him at the carriage door. "Go," said Bonaparte, quietly but quickly to Lannes, "go to the box directly opposite to us on the third tier You'll find a young girl in a dark mantle Bring her to the Tuileries. I must see her," and without raising his eyes, but to make Lannes certain of the person, he took the general's arm, and said, pointing upward, "See there—look!"

Bonaparte stopped suddenly. The girl was gone. No black mantle was to be seen Annoyed at this beyond measure, he hurriedly sent off Lannes to intercept her It was all in vain. The boxkeeper had seen such an individual but knew nothing about her. Bonaparte applied to Fouche and Dubois, but all the zeal of these functionaries failed in discovering her

Years ran on after the explosion of the infernal machine, and the strange accompanying circumstances tended to make the occurrence more remarkable in the eye of Bonaparte To the Consulate succeeded the Empire, and victory after victory marked the career of the great Corsican At length the hours of change came Allied Europe poured its troops into France, and compelled the Emperor to lay down the sceptre which had been so long shaken over half the civilized earth The isle of Elba became for a day the most remarkable spot on the globe and, finally, the resuscitated Empire fell to pieces anew on the field of Waterloo

Bonaparte was about to quit France The moment had come for him to set foot on the bark which was to convey him to the British vessel Friends who had followed the fallen chief to the very last were standing to give him a final adieu He waived his hand to those around, and a smile was on his lips which had recently given the fare well kiss to the imperial eagle At this instant a woman broke the band that stood before Napoleon She was in the prime of womanhood, not a girl, but yet young enough to retain unimpaired that beauty for which she would at any time have been remarkable among a crowd of beauties Her features were full of anxiety and sadness, adding interest to her appearance even at this moment. "Sire!" said she, presenting a paper at that moment, "read! read!" The Emperor took the epistle presented to him, but kept his eye on the presenter He seemed, it may be to feel at that instant the perfumed breeze of the park of St. Cloud, or to hear the choristers chanting melodiously in the chapel as he had heard them in other days Josephine, Duroc and all his friends came hugly before him, and among them the fair one which he was wont to see in the fourth window in the gallery His eye was now on that countenance in reality, altered, yet the same These illusory recollections were of short duration. Napoleon shook his head and held the paper up to his eyes After perusing its contents he took the paper between his hands and tore it to pieces, scattering the fragments in the air.

"Stop, sire!" said the woman, "follow the advice I Be warned! It is yet time"

"No," replied he, and taking from his finger a beautiful oriental ruby, a valuable souvenir of his Egyptian campaigns, held it out to the woman She took it kneeling, and kissed the hand which presented it Turning his head, the Emperor then stepped into the boat which waited to take him to the vessel Not long afterward, he was pining on the rock of St. Helena.

Thus of the three warnings, two were useless because neglected until danger had occurred, and the third—which prognosticated Napoleon's fate if once in the power of his adversaries—the third was rejected.

"But who was this woman, Duke of Otranto?

"Oh," replied the Duke, "I know not, with certainty. The Emperor, if he know ultimately, seems to have kept the secret"

All that is known respecting the matter is, that a female related to St. Hogent, one of the authors of the explosion of the street St. Nicholas, died at the hospital of Hotel Dieu, in 1837, and that round her neck was suspended by a silk ribbon, the exquisite oriental ruby of Napoleon.

THE GREAT SURRENDER.—On the morning of the 9th of April, the victors of Five Forks planted themselves squarely across the front of Lee's head of column and sealed up the retreat. The iron cavalry leader had during a 30-mile march, the day before, captured four trains of cars loaded with Lee's supplies at Appomattox Depot, and forcing his way thence by hard fighting had, after taking many prisoners, 25 guns, a hospital train and a park of wagons, drawn his line across the road on which the enemy was marching to Lynchburg. At dawn, in a last desperate attempt, Lee ordered his advance guard, a few thousand men under Gordon, to cut its way through The half-starved troops, charging with old-time gallantry, forced back the dismounted cavalry; but those, drawing away to the right as a curtain is drawn, disclosed the lines of the Fifth Corps and of Ord, at which spectacle the Confederates paused.

With infantry pressing full upon its front, and with greater hostile masses closing up the rear, with Sheridan's horsemen mounted on the flank and ready to swoop upon the trains and confused forces of the Confederate army, the last day of the struggle had well nigh been a day of slaughter. For the unvirtued army, with a valor all Spartan, stood ready to die after the manner of Thermopylæ, not indeed in response to civic laws denying surrender, but obedient to the lofty impulse of honor.

But the sacrifice was not to be. While Gordon was throwing his troops to the front, behind them, at Gen. Lee's headquarters, three Confederate officers were holding a final consultation on the desperate strait of their fortunes. They were Lee, Longstreet and Mahone, it was but little after day break of a very raw April morning, and they gathered around the former officer's camp-fire by the side of the road; some staff officers were present at a little distance from the consultation. Mahone had just come up from his post in the rear of the column to the front, at the summons of Gen. Lee. Longstreet, who had one arm in a sling, sat on the trunk of a felled tree gravely smoking a cigar. Lee, cordial and pleasant, and clad in the new uniform he had donned just before leaving Petersburg, was as serene and cheerful as ever, his face, at least, betraying not the slightest discomposure at this crisis in his career. Gen. Lee explained to Mahone the purport of the note received from Gen. Grant proposing surrender, for although the division commanders had surmised the object of Grant's flags in entering their lines, they had not been certainly informed. He then asked for his opinion as that of a subordinate on the condition of the army. Mahone replied that while his own division and one or two others were still able to fight, the rest of the army were so worn down as to be only fit for surrender And, indeed, a single glance showed this army to consist only of about 8,000 effective fighting men, who, half in front and half in rear, were covering a confused rank of ruined trains, fragments of batteries—the wrecks of the Army of Northern Virginia. To fly was as hopeless as to fight, since there was no route possible except to the North, and no friendly night to cover, for day had just dawned, the fugitive host was caught in a basin, with no escape from the grasp of its pursuers unless the surrounding hills had fallen upon them.

Longstreet and Mahone nevertheless declared that the army deserved and would accept honorable terms alone. Gen. Lee answered that the proposals of Gen. Grant had been very generous, and showed that the latter officer had been prepared to give such terms as the Army of Northern Virginia could offer to accept. But it was no longer certain that after two days' rejection those terms could be procured. There was no doubt, however, of the duty to make the effort, and Gen. Lee, rising, and mounting his horse, turned to say, "Longstreet, I leave you in charge here, I am going to hold a conference with Gen Grant" Hardly had Gen Lee gone to the rear, when Gen. Custer dashed at full speed down the road from the opposite quarter, bearing a white flag. He flung himself from his horse, and saluting Gen. Longstreet, asked him if he were in command. Gen. Longstreet replied in the affirmative. Gen. Custer responded, "I demand the surrender of this army to Gen Sheridan's cavalry." The other rejoined, "I do not command the army for that purpose, Gen. Lee is now at the rear under a flag of truce, communicating with Gen. Grant for the purpose of surrender." Gen Custer retired, and, at the instance of the Confederates, the attack threatened in front was stopped

So on the 9th of April, the work begun at Five Forks was finished in triumph at Appomattox Courthouse. The long toil was over; an emotion commingled of relief from arduous labor and of exultation at the crowning victory, tempered by a soldier's respect for the bravery of the vanquished, overflowed the hearts of the conquerors on that memorable day. But those who stood boldly there were not all the conquerors Ten thousand gallant hearts lay cold in soldiers' graves since a twelvemonth gone the army crossed the Rapidan, 10,000 heroes, scarred and maimed, were far away in the villages and cities of the North; and tens and tens of thousands more, poisoned by the daily swamps breath or worn down by the toils of campaign, had dropped by the wayside, languished long on hospital pallets, or deserving quick death in victory had yielded to the torture of disease. Not only those who fell in the wilderness, at Spottsylvania, along the North Ann, at Cold Harbor, in the trenches or environs of Petersburg—but the heroic dead who slept on the ridges of Fredericksburg and Gettysburg, whose rude beds lay hid in the gloom of the woods of Chancellorsville, or adown the Shenandoah Valley, or along the banks of the Chickahominy, or dotting the plains of Manassas, or whose baptismal blood rained on the streets of Baltimore—these all were conquerors on the 9th of April, and a vast host, silent, invisible, tasted the triumph of that day — Tuelve Decisive Battles

The New York Herald says that the New York Tribune has become "the recipient of the immense advertising patronage of our Copperhead city corporation," and that this "plum" is worth "fifty or sixty thousand dollars a year, at the lowest calculation" The Herald alleges that the Tribune receives this good thing in consequence of Mr Greeley's trip to Richmond

GOOD GOVERNMENT.—An old clergyman who had been an army chaplain, and was teaching a female seminary, in the course of conversation said, "I have been under civil government, ecclesiastical government, military government and petticoat government, and I like petticoat government the best"

Beecher on Writing Novels

New York Correspondence Syracuse Star 1ard

Talking of works and story making, a conversation took place between a friend of mine who makes books, and Mr Beecher, regarding Norwood which was altogether characteristic of the good dominie. "What possessed you to write a novel, Mr. Beecher?" "I can't tell you precisely I have always refused to do that thing but Bonner would not give me a moment's peace until I had promised I was influenced by two considerations, the price and time I have somethings to say which may not be said in the pulpit"

"And that is the idea, is it? I have ever observed that you hesitated much if you wanted to say anything in the pulpit."

"People think so, but it is a mistake, and since I commenced to write this book I have any number of them come to me and declare that I ought not to write a novel It was not ministerial and all that, but when those good folks begin to hedge me down I am disposed to fight. If I choose to write a novel, I will, but how that thing has bothered me"

"I am glad of it— you well know now what as poor wretches have to suffer who make a business of it"

"It is all very well for you who have nothing else to do, replied Mr Beecher with a lugubrious expression of countenance 'But you write two sermons a week and deliver them, and try novel writing at the same time"

"No, I thank you, one of these occupations is enough for me," said my friend. 'But how are you writing it, in numbers, or is it all furnished?'

"I am sending it it in numbers"

"Then you are making a big mistake. If you are not careful you will have a printer's devil chasing you about, hunting for copy, and then how can help you I tell you to finish the book first and get it off your hands, you will make a better thing and save yourself a tremendous bother. Don't send it in small lots."

"I will," said Beecher defiantly

"You must not. I beg of you, for the sake of the artistic construction of the story, to make one job of it"

"Look here, G——," said the dominie, "I have written that book all through once from beginning to end, and then was so disgusted with the thing that I was blue than I ever was before in all my life Oh, but I was despondent!"

"I appreciate the feeling," replied my sympathizing friend, "I have been there, but what did you do?"

"I got mad and saucy, I pitched all I had written into the waste basket and commenced fresh, and wrote just what I thought, and now I don't care a fig whether people like it or not."

THE DOMINION OF CANADA.—The new "Dominion of Canada" will consist of the Provinces of Ontario, now Upper Canada, Quebec, now Lower Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick The Executive power will be exercised through a Governor General and a Privy Council, designated by the former. The Parliament will consist of the Queen, a Senate and House of Commons. There will be three Senatorial Districts, each represented by twenty-four Senators, to be elected by the Queen, and who hold their positions for life, subject to certain conditions.

Each Province has its Lieutenant Governor, who is appointed by the Governor General, and holding office during his pleasure. It has its local legislature consisting of two Houses, the Legislative Assembly, exercising general jurisdiction over matters pertaining to the respective Provinces. The House of Commons will consist of 151 members, who are elected for five years, and it may be prorogued or dissolved by the Governor-General The salary of the latter is $50,000 The whole form of government seems to be shaped after that of England. It remains to be seen how the scheme will work—and how long.

AMERICAN FEET.—The New York Hide and Leather Journal notices a few of the differences in the shape of the pedal extremities of people in various sections of the country. Shoes made for one locality are not adapted for all. For instance, a broad shoe, wide in the shank, is best adapted to the Eastern trade, a narrow sole meeting with but little favor. Rhode Island, though the smallest State in the Union, can boast of the biggest feet that ever trod sole leather. The Middle States require slimmer shoes and higher in the instep than the East. The instep grows higher as we progress Southward, commencing with Virginia and the foot shorter and more plump. Rarely, at the North, does a full grown man wear less than a No. 9, running up in the scale of sizes to No. 11, but at the South, many a full-sized man wears fours and fives, and seldom ever nines

LONGFELLOW'S CHILDREN.—Buchanan Read, the artist and poet, writes as follows concerning his picture of "Longfellow's Children" A photographic copy of the above named picture, painted by me, having been widely circulated, wherein a fault in the attempted reproduction makes one of the arms disappear too suddenly, excited considerable comment among those who have not see the painting. I deem it just to the fair originals of the portrait, as well as to myself, to say that the blemish is owing entirely to the manner in which the group is vignetted—the lower part being imperfectly given in the copy. As the idle gossip which has been circulated about this missing arm may be annoying to others, I wish to settle the matter once for all, that it has no foundation, either in the original picture or the subject."

ABOUT THE RATIO.—During a late fair at Richmond, a valuable article was put up for a prize at one dollar a share, and comprising one hundred shares. A gentleman wishing to possess the prize and deeming it worth the sum required, offered to take all the shares not already sold. Only one had been taken, and he therefore took the remaining ninety-nine. Sanguine that the prize must fall to him, great was his astonishment to find, when the drawing was over, that the number he had missed was the lucky one, and that he was just ninety nine dollars out of pocket.

The Richmond Examiner says a young man of that city was much surprised on being waked, the morning after his marriage, by his wife sitting up in the bed, flapping her arms a la wings, stretching out her neck and crowing repeatedly, in exact imitation of a rooster. He learned that from birth such has been her custom, that while sound asleep, at daybreak she sits up, crows and lies down again. The reason given is that previous to her birth her mother was badly frightened by the crowing of a Shanghai under her window.
